

ABSTRACT

A toothbrush body includes an integral head, a body and a tail portion, wherein the head includes indents for receiving bristles and the tail portion, which is inclined relative to the body portion, includes an indent for receiving the base of an interdental brush.